

IV INTERNATIONAL SEMINAR ON HUMAN RIGHTS AND BUSINESS

1. ABOUT THE SEMINAR

The IV Homa - Center for Human Rights and Business (www.homacdhe.com) - International Seminar, will be held at the University of São Paulo (USP) Law School, Largo de São Francisco, from August 23rd to 25th, 2017. This edition is being promoted with the support of USP Department of International and Comparative Law, in the person of its Head, Professor Dr. Paulo Borba Casella, and Professor Dr. André de Carvalho Ramos.

This event takes place two months before the Third Intergovernmental Negotiation Session of the Treaty on Human Rights and Business, when the representative of Ecuador, president of the Intergovernmental Group, has the task, according to Res. 26/9 of the UN Human Rights Council, of presenting a document with the foundations for the binding instrument, thus proceeding to a new stage in which it is expected that the States and other international players will be more involved or resistant to the process. In other words, the agenda around the treaty will be a concrete reality that will test the capacity of qualified incidence of the organized civil society and of research centers in order to express the historical yearnings of those affected by Human Rights violations perpetrated by transnational companies, still protected by a framework of mostly non-binding rules.

At the same time, we observe a movement throughout Latin America, with a significant participation of European Union countries, in order to "sponsor" efforts to elaborate the National Action Plans on Business and Human Rights, whose diffusion and internalization through States is defended by the first report of the Business and Human Rights WG released in 2012, shortly after the consensual approval of John Ruggie's Guiding Principles in 2011. Based on pronouncements by government representatives, it also becomes apparent that this lobby for National Plans has played a role of shifting the efforts that would be invested in the treaty process towards the consecration of the content and logic of the Guiding Principles, that is the corporate capture of Human Rights constraints and their enforceability, as well as their maintenance in a voluntarist plan. In addition to this worrying scenario, there is another of institutional and democratic erosion in the countries on the region, which has resulted in serious setbacks in Human Rights, and poses an even greater challenge to Human Rights advocates seeking to offer some form of resistance or restraint to this environment, favorable to corporate impunity.

In this context, therefore, knowledge exchange and the evaluation of experiences of resistance on the subject that may offer alternatives to the advancement of the domain of business interests and conservatism in the region become even more urgent. The IV Seminar is thus conceived as one more space, that now has the priority of gathering social players and academics involved in this field in Latin America. In addition, it aims to attract more partners, so that we prepare for both the Third Intergovernmental Session of negotiation of the Binding Treaty and so that we can reflect on long-term mechanisms capable of offering some alternatives to cope with the regional political scenario. It also intends to provide a discussion on the urgent need to reverse the so-called "statecentric logic" of International Law, laying ground for what we call a "Bottom-Up" Law, capable of also representing peoples' aspirations.
